

I was surprised about a week later when Alfonsina, my mother and SHINOHARA and the Aide came to the house. My mother asked me to Explain to the Aide to the Governor, who spoke English like myself, that he should marry Alfonsina and later on when he is to leave he could divorce her and that would make it alright but the Aide to the Governor said no, that is just a big joke because Alfonsina could not marry him in wartime. SHINOHARA asked me to explain to my mother that this was impossible, that the Aide could not marry my sister. After that I took my mother down to the house which I had rented before the war and she stayed there. That night the Aide to the Governor came to the house and stayed with my sister. SHINOHARA and the Aide to the Governor took my sister into a room and pointed it out as "her room". During the evening my sister was crying. She did not want to sleep with a Jap because she was engaged to a native boy in the mess branch of the American Navy. SHINOHARA told us that while we were living in Mrs. Kerner's house we were not to leave the house unless we let him know or telephone Sumay and let the Governor know. I understand Shinohara was paid a hundred yen a month with which to supply us with food. SHINOHARA told me that I would be given 15 yen a month but I never received any of it. He also promised me food and supplies. The only time SHINOHARA ever threatened me is when he first told me that if I did not go and live with the Governor I would have to go to a whorehouse.

Has testified that: "Some time in February, 1942, SHINOHARA came to this place where I was then living and requested that I go and work as a service girl at the club for Japanese officers in Agana which is Mrs. Kerner's house. By service girl, SHINOHARA explained that the term meant that I was to go to this house and act as a waitress, a companion and to live with the Japanese officers as man and wife, if such was requested of me. The first time he made this request I did not accompany him. I refused to go to that life. I made excuses and stalled him off so that he went away. The second time he came I was afraid and things were different. I told SHINOHARA that I was reluctant to enter into this life, to which he replied and said that if I did not go, the Japanese would punish me. After this I consented and said that I would go but that if I didn't like it I would leave. To this he said: "O.K., let's go and try it." As a bribe to get me to go into this life he offered me anything which I might wish to make me come. He offered me money or food or anything I wished. I went with SHINOHARA immediately and he took me to the Kerner house. We arrived there at about 4:30 or 5:00. There were three of us: Darling Matanane, Theodore Soriano and myself. We proceeded to clean the house and make ready for that night. At about 7:00 the Governor came with the Aide and SHINOHARA. SHINOHARA instructed us that we were to serve the beer for the Japanese officers. SHINOHARA told us before he left that we should sit near the person to whom we were to be attached and be ready to do anything which they requested. When SHINOHARA left he locked the doors from the outside so that none of us can leave. Both the front door and the rear door to the house were locked from the outside. Sometime while I was serving the Jap officers, I got the idea that I didn't like this life and that I would run away so I went to the door to leave the house and found the door locked from the outside. We continued to serve the Governor beer until three o'clock in the morning. Then I got to crying and he asked me why I was crying. I told him that I did not like the life and he asked me if I didn't
